Dogs 'n' Doorbells

In the midst of preparations for a Season Preview Evening and Canal Day, Director, Brenda Williams, has been putting the cast of BCP's Season opening production, Alan Ayckbourn's "Absurd Person Singular", through their paces.

The challenge of putting together a production with three entirely different kitchens is being met head on by the talented design team but the props team also have a challenge on their hands dressing the three sets with authentic 1970s kitchen paraphernalia. "It's all bright orange and brown" has been the cry thus far.

In addition, the offstage voices of neighbours Dick and Lottie Potter (heard but never seen) are being tackled "live" by the backstage crew – rather than being recorded, which leaves sound tech, Mark Neale, with the task of voicing George – the Jacksons' dog – and providing the myriad of doorbells to support the comings and goings of the three different households.

An evening guaranteed to be non-stop, classic Ayckbourn comedy – a laugh a minute, not-to-be-missed production coming to a theatre near you – The Mill Arts Centre, Banbury – 21-24 October 2015.
